

Chambishi High School classrooms built on the donation by NFCA put into use

Recently, news from NFC Africa Mining Plc (NFCA for short), a Zambia-stationed enterprise of CNMCL, says that the Chambishi High School classrooms built on the nearly US$ 100,000 of investment have been put into use. This is yet another move of NFCA for fulfilling its corporate social responsibility and benefiting local community.

According to Chunlai Wang, DCEO of CNMCL and general manager of NFCA, as a member enterprise of the publicly listed company, NFCA will further upgrade its capability of fulfilling its corporate social responsibility and repaying local community, work with the local government in Zambia to promote the development of Zambia's education cause and discover more talents for local community.

Over these years, NFCA has always been promoting the social and economic development of Zambia and actively engaging itself in developing social causes of the public good. It has built many public facilities for local community, including school buildings, roads, clinics, and bus stations. It has promoted the development of local education, health service, and sports causes and received high praise from local government. To promote local social development and upgrade local education quality, NFCA offered subsidies to 18 students from Copperbelt University and donated 86 million Kwacha (about US$ 30,000) of scholarship to Copperbelt University of Zambia. It also donated fund to build the high school classrooms of the Chambishi district, in which it is located.
